TALE OF THE LOST EXTRA.

A SUSPICIOUS YARN OF RAILROADING IN THE NORTHWEST.

An Operator Received Orders to Look Out for an "Extra" That Never Arrived—An Old Farmer Furnishes a Clew, but It Was Never Fully Worked Out.

"Yes, that's considerable of a story, if it's true; but you can calculate with a wonderful degree of accuracy that any-

[illegible]

...anything of the extra. At 3:30 I received a dispatch from them at Bunker Hill:

"'Track clear. No trace of extra.'

"Before I could express my astonishment I was joined by the conductor of No. 3, who was sweating fluently.

"'What does it mean, Higbie?' he asked.

"I was nonplussed, but finally told him to pull cautiously down to Bunker Hill and if he saw nothing to go on as usual, and make up as much time as possible. At 3:40 I received the following from the conductor at Bunker Hill:

"'Just arrived. Could find nothing of extra.'

"I ordered a track walker to search closely between Jimville and Bunker Hill. He found nothing except what looked like traces of the train having jumped the track. But nothing further.

THE FARMER'S STORY

"Days passed into weeks, until the weary months dragged their slow lengths along, leaving the tantalizing mystery wrapped in still more impenetrable gloom, until one day an old farmer drifted into the depot and asked if I had been losing any trains lately. 'For,' the old man chuckled, 'I saw one runnin' 'round loose last winter. It ran up to my farm yard and the engineer axed me if he might fill his biler tank at my well. I said he might and got him a bucket. After he had filled up he axed me the road to the nearest town, borried a chaw o' tobacky and lit out. I never seed him since,' and the honest farmer shuffled away.

"Well, that was three years ago. I have not seen the lost extra, but I have heard from it several times. It was seen by a belated hunter one stormy night, when it rushed by him like the wind, its headlight gleaming like the evil eye of some demon. Others have heard its unearthly shriek mingling with the howling storm. Sometimes it startles the lonely farmer in the dead of night, when the engineer will ask permission to take water, and inquire the direction to the nearest town. It is seldom seen by railroad men, who call it the Flying Dutchman of the plains, and consider it an evil omen when seen by one of them. It is said that poor Billy Yates saw the specter train coming down the track just before he struck the broken rail that hurled him and two others into eternity."

Higbie threw the stub of his cigar into the stove and ceased talking. There was a dreary silence for a few moments, and then a tall, gaunt figure arose out of the shadow in the corner and remarked in a sepulchral voice:

"I believe that's a prevarication."—Burlington Hawkeye.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier:

The Bangor Commercial printed an entirely uncalled for and gratuitously slurring account of the Orono fire Thursday. It undertook to bear down heavily upon Mr. Lynch, who is an invalid, caused by service in the war of the rebellion, and as recompense in part for his services in those trying times he is one of our government's honored veterans. Mr. Lynch, although only a poor Irishman, is entitled to as much respect as some of our more wealthy citizens. He has a lovely family, upon whom the insulting words of the Commercial fall with crushing force. During the fire one of his daughters had to be removed from a sick bed and another was prostrated by excitement. The people of Orono, irrespective of party, sect or religion, most heartily condemn the article.

Now one word in regard to the origin of the fire. While it is thought a spark from the burning brush might have set it, there is no certainty of the fact. There were two other ways in which the fire might have originated, each of which have their advocates. The chimney of the bar mill is located very near the burned ice house, from which burning cinders are often seen issuing in large quantities ... [illegible]

LARGE OR SMALL LOTS FOR CASH OR ON the MARGIN [illegible]

A YOUNG MAN ADOPTED THE ABOVE AS A MOTTO AND GOT RICH.

"Men Don't Do What They Like; They Do What They Can"—This Young Man Understood Pickles, and Into Pickles He Went—Good Advice.

There lives in the city of New York a man who has accumulated quite a fortune by simply advising people what to do. There always will be a large number of persons who are unable to rely on their own judgment; others come to a conclusion with ease and certainty.

A young man had accumulated a thousand dollars and was debating whether he should buy a small candy store with it, or whether he should lend it on a mortgage. This latter he knew was the secure way; the other promised great profits. In this perplexity he saw an advertisement: "Advice given to those going into business."

After stating his case the counselor said: "My fee will be $5 in advance."

When this was paid he asked: "Do you understand the candy business?"

"No, I did not think it was necessary. I expect to supervise it generally."

"Then you will lose all your money in three months."

"You think I had better lend the money on the mortgage?"

"I do not say that. What is your business; that is, what do you perfectly understand?"

"I know the pickle business through and through. I can make pickles of all kinds, but I do not like it."

"Never mind what you like. Go and get a small place and make pickles; go from hotel to hotel, restaurant to restaurant, and sell them. In ten years come back and see me; you will have $10,000 at least."

As the young man was going away he was called back.

"Here is a card I want you to put it where you can see it a hundred times a day." These were the words on the card: "Business is business. Men don't do what they like, they do what they can."

THE FASCINATING CARD.

The card had a strange fascination for him; he read it with care as he walked along the street. As he studied it, new light seemed to enter his mind.

He found a dingy basement, and began to arrange for his operations. Of course vinegar must be got, several barrels of it; some was offered him at ten cents a gallon, some more was shown at five cents. "Which shall I take?" He thought of the words on his card. He seemed to see people testing his pickles, and, not liking them, depart without buying. "They will know good vinegar," thought he, and so he bought the honest stuff.

In a few days several tubs of materials were ready, and he knew he must market them. Now he greatly dreaded to face strange people and push his goods upon their notice. He never had courage when a boy, and now as a young man he felt more timid it seemed. But he thought of the words of the card, and entered a restaurant. The evident manager was a blooming young woman, and the pickle dealer was more afraid of women than men. But "business is business" repeated itself over and over in his mind.

The answer to his statement was that his pickles would be tried, and, if found all right, would be purchased.

"Glad I got that good vinegar," thought the young man; and he began to feel that there was a certain power in the maxim his adviser had given. He began to feel a courage he had never expected in meeting people and trying to sell his goods to them.

Calling at a store to get, if possible, an order for pickles in bottles, he was quickly and rudely met with, "Don't want to see any such stuff." Noticing the utter dismay on the young man's face, the merchant said, short and sharp: "Don't you know enough of business to put up your goods attractively?"

As he retreated, ruffled and disheartened, the maxim repeated itself over and over with this additional sentence. "It is business to put up goods attractively." He sought out a lithographer and had some handsomely colored labels printed. "They will buy the bottles," said the friend, "just for the picture you have on them."

APPRECIATED ADVICE.

When he had gained sufficient courage he again sought out the merchant who had rebuffed him. "I have come to make you a present of a bottle of fine pickles."

"Why do you make me a present of them?"

"Because you gave me advice that was worth a great deal."

The morning of one Fourth of July came, and he pondered whether to go to his store or not. All at once he thought, people going on picnics will want pickles. It was the magic words on the little card that ran through his mind. He found, as he had thought, a large number of buyers waiting for him.

The little card was consulted in all sorts of weather. If a man made a proposition to him of any kind, and he was in doubt, he would go and look at the words, though he knew them by heart already. One day a cheese merchant came to persuade him to buy his stock.

"People," said he, "who buy pickles always buy cheese; you will do a big trade." It was a temptation. He went and looked at the words and studied them intently, trying to think out their application to the case in hand. "Men do what they can," he reflected. "I would like to sell cheese, but I know I can sell pickles," then he returned. Now he was resolute and firm, although by nature easily bent and swayed by the words of others.

"Business is business," he said. "I am in the pickle business. If I cannot make money in this I shall quit and go into something else; but I shall not have two kinds on my hands."

When the ten years were up of course he had the $10,000, and more, too.—Treasure Trove.

Feathered Dentists in Virginia.

George E. Heath, who lives in Hanover county, a short distance from Ashland, was in the city today. He states that on Saturday morning he went to his hennery and attempted to take a hen off her roost, when she flew in his face, pecked him in his mouth, and took out a tooth which had been troubling Mr. Heath for some time, and which he intended having extracted.—Norfolk Landmark.

African Shoes.

There was a pair of wooden clogs, with Arabic inscriptions on them, which were sent to Mr. Ward by Tippo Tib as a kind of Christmas card. The only way to keep them on your feet is to grasp a peg, which sticks up in the forward part, with two of your toes. The fortunate Central African has toes as deft as our fingers.—New York Sun.

We cannot walk alone;
A hand unseen doth lead us, day by day,—
Else we should faint and fall upon the way,
Foot-sore and weary grown.

A gentle, guiding hand,
That leads us on through life's bewildering maze;
Dealing with us, ofttimes, in many ways
We cannot understand.

In pitying tenderness,
That hand is ever outstretched from above
'Tis His, whose nature and whose name is Love—
Ready to guide and bless.

He knoweth all our woes,
For us compassion in His bosom lies,
His heart is touched with our infirmities,
We are but dust, He knows.

Our Guardian and Guide!
He sees the pitfalls that await our feet;
He knoweth the temptations we shall meet,
Lurking on every side.

"In trials, undismayed,
Hold ever fast unto my hand," he saith,
"Dangers innumerable the journey hath,
'Tis I; be not afraid!

Thou canst not walk alone;
Too weak art thou to bear life's wrongs and wrath,
And all the evils that beset the path,
To thee untried, unknown."

So I will trust His hand
To lead me on, if it be near or far—
The Heaven I seek, where all my loved ones are—

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

Durham had a big excitement Tuesday afternoon. The grass in the fields near the village, on the premises of Messrs. Dingley, Haskell and Drinkwater was ablaze, and all the people were out trying to put it out. The village was endangered and the local citizens put in some great work in their efforts to save it. The bells were rung and the towns folk for miles around rushed in with all haste. Happily the blaze was subdued after having burned over from seventy-five to one hundred acres. A man set a lot of brush on fire and the blaze got the best of him.

Mr Lancaster, of Webster who sells butter in this market tells this story. He was plowing, last fall, when he lost his pocket-book. A long hunt did not restore it. Winter passed and snow piled deep upon the plowed land. The other day he traversed the same field and in the furrow where the water ran in rivulets was found the pocket-book in good condition, money all safe and papers restorable.

The bear and most of the Lake Grove Menagerie has been in winter quarters at John Pettingill's, East Auburn. The other day, Wilber Kimball, an Auburn shoemaker, was playing with the bear, when suddenly the animal snapped at the shoemaker's left hand. The movement was so unexpected that before the man was enabled to draw his arm from the cage the bear had caught him in the left hand just above the thumb. Two teeth went through, or very nearly so, on one side and one tooth on the other. The shoemaker now has a very painful hand and arm and will lose considerable time by the accident. He had been playing with the bear more than half an hour before the attack.

Franklin.

A Phillips man had an experience that rivals that of a dime novel hero. While bathing in the Sandy river, years ago, he was seized with a cramp and stayed under fifteen minutes, but was finally resuscitated. He entered the army, and a horse fell on him. After his return he broke his arm and was otherwise severely injured by a log rolling over him while working on a landing in township No. 6. Later, while lumber driving on Dead river, a whole landing of logs came down on him and he was taken out for dead about an hour afterwards. Last December, while hauling lumber for Gilbert Brothers, near Mt. Abram, his leg was broken by the recoil of a stick. Though still obliged to use crutches, he is now pluckily superintending a drive on the south branch of Dead river for J. Manchester Haynes, of Augusta.

Kennebec.

Rev Herbert Tilden, of Farmington, is to deliver the oration in Hallowell on Memorial Day.

Mr. Wellington Smith a prominent citizen of Augusta, died Wednesday aged seventy-one years. He had been a member of the city government and formerly was engaged in lumbering at Gardiner.

Monday, Mr. Napoleon Lambert and Miss Rose Pomeleau were united in matrimony at the St. Francis DeSales church in Waterville, Rev. Father Charland officiating. The friends of the bride and groom made a regular Fourth of July of the occasion and the scenes that ensued reminded one of the pictures of a wedding festival in an old French or English town. The workmen in the stone-yard where the groom was employed took a holiday, and so did the stone-yard, which was gaily decked out. The guys to the derrick were festooned with American flags, and from a line hung across the street were suspended the square, hammer and other tools of the groom, surmounted by the top of an evergreen tree.

How different modern ideas as to funeral proprieties to-day are from those of our great grandfathers, is shown by a correspondent of an exchange who describes the funeral of one Moses Judkins of Fayette, sixty years ago. The coffin was placed upon a bier and this was carried on the shoulders of the bearers. It was a long distance, by a hilly route, from the Ridge to Fayette Corner where the body was buried. Quite a number of young men acted as bearers. The funeral took place in hot weather and when one set of four became heated and tired they transferred their burden to the shoulders of four others. From time to time the solemn procession halted and all its members were refreshed by a draught of rum. Four gallons of this liquid refreshment were dispensed.

Carelessness in laying out streets has led to an unpleasant state of things in Waterville. In numerous places in the city, the streets and walks occupy land actually belonging to private citizens. A writer in the Sentinel says that if the buildings to be built on several corners should be extended to the full limits of the lot belonging to the gentlemen who will build, the sidewalk and a portion of the street would be cut off in each case. This lesson of greater care in lining out and grading streets, is one that most New England cities have had to learn from an experience more or less sad.

Oxford.

Mr. Norcross, the chief miner at Gum Corner in Byron, got ready to run his sluice Wednesday. He commenced work about 10 A. M., and those who saw the result of his day's work say he got more than $10 worth of gold.

Wednesday Mexico people enjoyed a grand sight. For nearly three hours just after noon, the Androscoggin was filled with running poplar. It came either from Ellis or Concord rivers.

Penobscot.

Mr. A. R. Bodge, one of the most experienced bee-keepers in Dexter, reports that he had twenty swarms of bees to winter and finds eighteen of them dead, and he is even more lucky than some of the others. Such a bee fatality has not been known before. Mr. Bodge thinks the fatality will not increase the price of swarms, as such experience discourages buyers.

Piscataquis.

On Sunday last a little son, ten years of age, of Uriah Stubbs, of Milo, tripped and fell on a sharp ax in his father's yard, inflicting a fearful wound just below the left knee, severing the tendon to kneecap. A physician was called and took several stitches in the wound.

Somerset.

The inhabitants of Fairfield Village Corporation have been a great deal exercised of late on the subject of an electric fire alarm. After almost insisting the vote [illegible]

Washington.

Two wild goose chases came together in Machias Bay, the other day. A Bar Harbor landlord, while out bird-hunting in his handsome yacht, was surprised to be boarded by the sheriff of Washington county and five of his men. Explanations did not go down. The sheriffs were positive that this was the craft they had been instructed to look out for and they would not leave her until they had thoroughly searched her three different times for contraband goods! Finally all hands concluded to call it a joke, and the landlord went home with a good bag of geese and a good story to tell.

York.

As Mr E. C. Small and wife, of Cornish village, were sitting in their house, Sunday, with friends, something shot past the window and struck with a heavy thud on the stable. The company rushed to the door and there lay a partridge quivering in its death throes. Mr. Small quickly decapitated the bird with his pocket knife and the next day Mr. and Mrs. Small dined on partridge stew.

York county is the only section of Maine that seems to be dubious with regard to the outlook for horsemen. The Biddeford Journal says though the Breeders and the York County Agricultural Society will without doubt hold meetings in the fall and give some good races, the management will be entirely dependent upon horses outside the county.

People who do not enjoy hearing a neighbor's daughter practicing on the piano can sympathize with a Biddeford man who now has three empty tenements on his hands. He owns and lives in a house usually occupied by three families beside himself. One of these families had musical proclivities and sung a good deal evenings. The owner of the house, after ineffectually trying to bring the concerts to an end at nine o'clock, served legal warning upon this family to vacate his tenement. A woman in one of the other tenements laughed at him for doing so, and her family had to pick up and leave. The third tenant, probably conscious that she, too, had laughed, went without being told to, and quiet now rests upon that mansion.

TRUSTS AND MISTRUSTS.

We are often asked to put our trust in things above; sometimes customers ask for "trust" and the pleasant grocery clerk "trusts" all your family are well. Then there are sugar trusts, pork and grain trusts and other trusts, including mistrust. But we trust you will at once try Brussels soap for household use, for you can safely trust to its efficacy. Then it is so lasting, you know, and economical.
